

The Southwest Health Equity Research Collaborative Community Engagement Core

The Southwest Health Equity Research Collaborative (SHERC) is funded to increase NAU's basic biomedical, clinical, and behavioral health research capacity to address health disparities among diverse populations of the Southwest region. The initiative is funded by the National Center of Minority Health and Health Disparities and administered by NAU's Center for Health Equity Research (NIH #U54MD012388).

The Community Engagement Core of SHERC is pleased to announce a webinar open to those working in community and university settings.

Community-Based Participatory Research: Principles and Voices

Monday, July 2, 2018

2:00-3:00pm MST

This 1-hour webinar will focus on community-based participatory research (CBPR), an approach used to form equitable and meaningful research partnerships between communities and universities. In this webinar, basic principles of CBPR will be covered and members from a community-academic partnership will share their experiences with the development, benefits, and challenges of their team.

Partners featured: Jamie Wilson, MPH (University of Arizona), Herschel Clark, MPH (University of Arizona and Black Hills Center of American Indian Health), and Alfred Yazzie (Black Hills Center for American Indian Health).

❖ Please RSVP at: <http://cher.nau.edu/index.php/cher-events/>

This webinar will be available online for remote participation, with an in-person alternative available. Details will be emailed to registrants closer to event date.